FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

BILLINGS –Rocky Mountain College had a successful sale of equestrian apparel to support the program, thanks to widespread support from faculty, staff, board members, and friends of the College.

“We appreciate the willingness to help, and the support that we received with this fundraiser. I hope that this continues in years to come,” said Morgan Matteson, an RMC equestrian student who organized the sale with assistance from the RMC Students In Free Enterprise (SIFE).

More than $500 was raised, which will be used to purchase a camcorder that the instructors can use to refine techniques for teaching students. They will also have a way for students to critique themselves in class, Matteson said.

The apparel offered included T-shirts, hooded sweatshirts, sweat pants and baseball caps in black with a green logo and gold lettering.

“I know every equine student thanks those who supported us in the sale by purchasing the apparel,” said Matteson. “We’re also grateful to those who donated (without purchasing apparel).”
